

Performance Commentary

The global equity market remained strong in February and SKAGEN Global outperformed its benchmark index. The fund's top-3 absolute performers were Beazley, Hiscox and Microsoft. After recently meeting with the management teams of Beazley and Hiscox, we continue to consider them significantly undervalued for investors with a long-term horizon. The fund's bottom-3 absolute performers were Deutsche Wohnen, Samsung Electronics and Nissan Chemical.

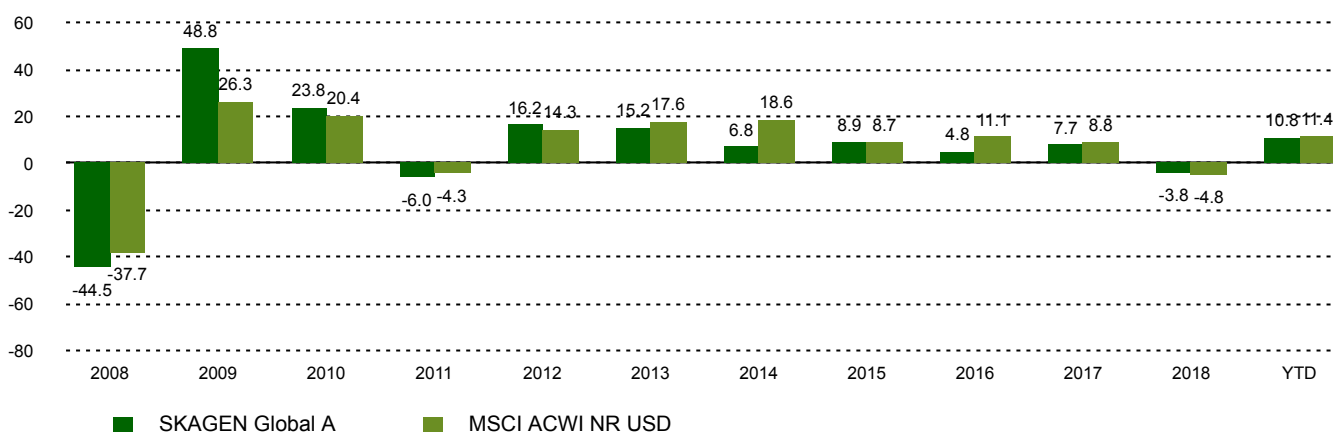

In February, we entered a new position in Edwards Lifesciences, a leading medical technology company focusing on cardiovascular diseases. This clear focus combined with a successful track record of pioneering break-through technologies seems undervalued by the market. We also built a new position in Abbott Laboratories, another health care company where our proprietary analysis points to an underappreciated opportunity for organic growth with incremental margin improvement and judicious capital allocation. Note that both new holdings reflect SKAGEN Global's long-term partnership mentality where we seek to invest in undervalued franchises that are managed for long-term success, not for the next quarterly result. Indeed, the CEOs of both companies have tenures exceeding 15 years.

We took profit and exited our position in the Japanese conglomerate Sony, which has performed well during its three-year presence in the fund.
