Performance Commentary

August ended with a sharp sell-off after the Fed conveyed a "higher for longer" message, expected to be followed by a similar message from the ECB. Central banks appear to have collectively decided a mild recession is acceptable to anchor inflation expectations. Real estate on a global basis is now trading at a deep discount relative to long-term history, but with large variances between segments and geographies. Much of the bad news appears to be discounted already, but things can always get worse before they improve. Opinions are divided as to whether the inflation has peaked, how much growth will weaken and when the first-rate cut will come. The top contributor to fund performance was Brazilian logistics operator LOG on the back of solid quarterly results. Our Asian real estate manager ESR also delivered a strong report with solid occupancy and rental growth in most markets. Norwegian Self Storage Group reported surprisingly high occupancy, showing resilience as expected in turbulent times. The fund's largest detractor was the US manufactured homes operator UMH due to delays from suppliers leading to lower sales from new developments. SKAGEN m2 continues to focus on resilient companies in trend-driven subsegments that are mispriced, that can perform in various market conditions, and that are well positioned for inflation.

The fund gives access to a normally inaccessible global real estate market. The fund selects low-priced, high-quality real estate companies from around the world. The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The fund has risk profile 6. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.
