Performance Commentary

July was typically quiet in many markets, but interest rates fell significantly in large parts of the world. The Eurozone in particular saw falling rates driven by fears of an economic setback. This was despite still strong consumer price growth and hawkish central banks. Credit spreads generally decreased somewhat during July but remain at high levels for many sovereigns. Geopolitics are front of mind these days and the end of July saw a flare-up of an old conflict with reports of shooting at the border between Serbia and Kosovo. The situation calmed down quickly, but clearly showed the potential for conflict is still present. The credit spreads on our Serbian exposure jumped by around 50 bps on the reports but has started to fall back as tensions have faded. SKAGEN Tellus generated a positive return in July, just about on par with the benchmark index. The largest positive contributors were our US and Mexican exposures driven by falling interest rates. On the negative side there was a slightly negative contribution from our Polish zloty denominated supranational bond due to a depreciating zloty versus the euro.

SKAGEN Tellus invests primarily in bonds and certificates issued or guaranteed by governments from around the world. The fund is suitable for those with at least a three year investment horizon. Investors must be able to tolerate currency fluctuations. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The fund has risk profile 4. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.
