

Performance Commentary

Global equities' upward trajectory came to an abrupt halt towards the end of October, with fears rising in tandem with higher COVID infection numbers. SKAGEN Vekst felt the impact but the fund fell less than the overall market, helped by positive company-specific news from a number of holdings. Vestas was one of these, with the Danish wind turbine producer announcing a buy-out of the JV partner in its offshore wind business. Offshore wind will be the main growth driver for the industry going forward, so getting full control of this business at an attractive price is seen as very positive. AIG also had a strong month as the US insurer announced a separation of its life and retirement business, which will help to simplify the company's complex structure. Despite upgrading its full year guidance, Novo Nordisk was among the largest detractors to the fund's absolute return in October. While volume growth was strong, higher use of rebates for its latest product created some uncertainty. Despite the stock market's large gains since its mid-March low, we still see significant upside in many cyclical companies, particularly within the financial and materials sectors.

The fund selects low-priced, high-quality companies in the Nordic region and from around the world.

The objective is to provide the best possible risk adjusted return.

The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon.
