Investment strategy

The fund selects undervalued companies from around the world, including emerging markets, with attractive risk-reward for long-term investors. The fund is suitable for those with at least a five year investment horizon. Subscriptions are made in fund units and not directly in stocks or other securities. The benchmark reflects the fund's investment mandate. Since the fund is actively managed, the portfolio will deviate from the composition of the benchmark.

Risk profile (SRI)

We have classified this product as 4 out of 7, which is a medium risk class.

The summary risk indicator is a guide to the level of risk of this product compared to other products. It shows how likely it is that the product will lose money because of movements in the markets. A medium risk class rates the potential losses from future performance at a medium level. Other risks materially relevant to the PRIIP not included in the summary risk indicator: Event risk, liquidity risk, operational risk, counterparty risk, derivatives risk and currency risk. If the fund invests in securities in a currency other than the fund's base currency, the value is affected by changes in the exchange rate. In addition, the value of your payout may be affected if your local currency is different from the fund's currency. This product does not include any protection from future market performance so you could lose some or all of your investment.

Portfolio manager commentary, January 2026

Global equity markets rose in the first month of 2026 with emerging markets taking the lead. In the bond market, the US generic government 10-year bond rate stayed calm at around 4.2%. The US dollar depreciated meaningfully against many European currencies. Looking towards the commodity market, gold and silver continued their furious climb before hitting a wall at the end of the month when silver crashed 36%, the worst daily drop since at least 1980, and gold posted its worst day in a decade. In our view, gold still looks significantly overvalued on rudimentary fundamentals.

In terms of other notable developments across the globe, the Trump administration continued its unconventional approach to politics and economics. Trump's recent claim to Greenland is a case in point of an unexpected geopolitical development that has caused a rift with European allies. Similarly, announcements from the presidential administration interfering in the US housing market and targeting credit card rates have been met with criticism from business leaders. Neither announcement is likely to combat inflation and increase affordability, two key tenets that US voters expect Trump to prioritise. In contrast to these negative spins, Trump's nomination of Kevin Warsh as the new head of the US Federal Reserve is likely a positive development because it will put an inflation hawk in charge of the central bank. We believe this strategic choice will serve the US economy and, by extension, its stock market well.

SKAGEN Global underperformed its benchmark index in January. However, we note the large index concentration in a small number of highly correlated technology giants. In our eyes, this concentration risk in the index seems excessive for prudent long-term investors and we are instinctively wary of running with the herd in big consensus holdings. The fund's three best performers, measured by absolute return contribution, were DSV, Alphabet (Google), and Home Depot. Both DSV and Alphabet extended the positive momentum seen in late 2025, as discussed in our previous update. US home improvement retailer Home Depot rebounded after a weak end to 2025, despite the absence of any material fundamental developments. The fund's three largest detractors measured by absolute return contribution were Microsoft, Brunello Cucinelli and Abbott Laboratories. The market punished Microsoft and Abbott on earnings reports that did not live up to market expectations while Brunello Cucinelli pulled back in tandem with other names in the luxury sector.

SKAGEN Global exited Samsung Electronics in late January on valuation grounds. The stock has had a phenomenal run since the trough in late 2024, but at current levels we consider expectations elevated and the risk-reward profile unattractive with material downside risk if the AI music in the market stops playing. The fund also substantially trimmed its holding in Home Depot. We will comment on other key portfolio activity, if any, at the end of the quarter.

We are only one month and a few earnings reports into the new year, so it is difficult to draw any firm conclusions thus far. A key point to monitor is whether the technology complex can continue its upward trend as capex spend pushes higher and valuation leaves limited room for disappointments. SKAGEN Global offers a different profile to the index and we believe that our materially undervalued portfolio is well positioned for long-term investors looking for prudent alternatives to a concentrated global index dominated by consensus holdings often trading at stretched valuations.

Sustainability

SKAGEN's approach to sustainability

Our ESG approach is built on four pillars. In keeping with SKAGEN's active investment philosophy, our sustainability activities centre on active engagement with our holding companies, which is where we believe we can have the greatest impact. We recognise, however, that the full potential of a sustainable investment strategy is best realised when combining the following four pillars.

- ✓ Exclusion
- ✓ Enhanced due diligence
- ✓ ESG factsheet
- ✓ Active ownership

Article 8

Sustainable Finance Disclosure Regulation (SFDR)

The product promotes environmental and social characteristics by directing its capital towards companies and issuers that meet defined ESG (environmental, social and governance) criteria. This is achieved through compliance with international norms and conventions, by taking into account negative impacts on sustainable development (PAI) and through product- or activity-based exclusions. See the prospectus for more information on the products sustainability characteristics.
